
WOODS BAGOT GROWS INTERIOR DESIGN PRACTICE

Woods Bagot appoints Jonathan Clarke to the role of Design Intelligence Leader, Interiors

Global architecture practice, Woods Bagot, has increased the strength of its Interior Design consultancy practice with the appointment of Jonathan Clarke, an architect with extensive experience in delivering award winning designs across luxury retail, hospitality and workplace projects.

As Design Intelligence Leader, Jonathan will act as both Project and Design lead for Woods Bagot's large scale projects across the UK, Europe, USA and the Middle and Far East.

Prior to his role at Woods Bagot, Jonathan held the position of Head of Interiors at Aedas Architects and was responsible for growing the company's London interiors business from the outset.

Jonathan has also held the role of Managing and Creative Director of the Universal Design Studios Ltd. He led the business by growing its strength in delivering luxury branded environments to clientele worldwide including international flagship stores for Stella McCartney, Selfridges and Liberty of London.

Projects of note during Jonathan's career include an office redesign for London advertising agency Fallon, Lounges and training facilities for Virgin Atlantic and Award winning restaurant design for Canteen in London. He was also influential in the design of The Core Club in New York, Abu Dhabi Investment Council HQ and the Global facade programme for H&M across the US and Japan.

Earle Arney, Director at Woods Bagot said, "Jonathan's appointment adds real strength to our Interior Design offering and will allow us to grow both the corporate and lifestyle offer to clients. Our interiors business has performed extremely well, despite the financial pressures of recent times, and I think Jonathan's appeal is his strong, architectural approach to interiors projects, which is rooted in research and exploration of the brand's he is working with."
